THE WRONG SPRING.

A Queer Mishap to Hume Yerington's New Carriage.

When H. M. Yerington got back from the Bay and read the APPEAL's account of the way he had converted Sam Wright's hearse into a private carriage, he was quite hot in the collar.

While he was azurising the atmosphere with his opinion of the article, his son Hume, who is the financier of the family, thought it would be a good opportunity to get hold of the carriage himself. He told the old gentleman he didn't care a rap for the newspapers and he would take the carriage and ride all over town with it and the first editor who made any remarks about it he would cancel the insurance on his office or raise the rate to $4.02 on the hundred.

"Take it my boy, and a father's blessing goes with the vehicle," was the response, and in less than an hour Hume had the carriage in his back yard.

It had undergone considerable change in the car shops. The sombre coat of woe that had characterized it years ago, when Sam Wright conveyed the illustrious departed of the capital to the silent city of the dead, was gone, and replaced by a more pleasing Railroad maroon with a gilded stripe along the edge and sky blue ornaments at each end. The wheels were a bright vermilion and the once melancholy vehicle now had a saucy, jaunty air that was beautiful to behold.

The work of changing its general graveyard characteristics, such as fitted it to glide along the pathway to the tomb, was not fully fit it for the fashionable boulevards of Carson, had been directed by a master hand. Mr. Fordling had personally superintended the work and by cutting the top-down in the center and placing hinges at each end, it could be turned into a fashionable open barouche, glittering with the polished splendor of the car shops, paint shops and machine shops.

Charles Redison had personally supervised the metal work and on looking upon it for the first time a piece of smoked glass was a necessity, for it was like viewing a lunar eclipse.

"Pretty hot stuff carriage," they said as they stepped in.

"Made to order," was the response. "The agents of the New York and London assurance companies have to put on a little style."

There were four San Francisco people in the drag and they spun along admiring the scenery at every turn. Hume was on the box, for under the new coaching club rules a gentleman driver has to handle the ribbons himself.

Presently the conversation ceased and Hume began to wonder what had come over the party. Then came a crash of glass and an explosion of profanity such as you never heard outside a mule corral.

Some fellow in the party had touched the wrong spring and the ends had flopped up, and the original condition of the old hearse had been suddenly restored. Then the four men were shut up in an oblong room with glass sides with the inscription at the end staring them in the face:

"Manufactured by the United Undertakers Company."

For several minutes they were unable to exactly understand the situation, but it gradually dawned upon them that they were in a hearse and being speeded to the cemetery.

Hume was on the box unconscious of the situation, while several people in carriages, supposing that some one was being buried, fell in behind the hearse from force of habit.

The side walks began to be crowded with people.

Then John Landers, of the Manhattan Life of San Francisco, kicked the glass sides to flinders and the inmates got some fresh air. Louis Ham, of the Anglo California Bank, jumped through the hole and began to call the driver hard names.

Louis Glass, of the San Francisco Telephone Company, stuck his head up through the top and called for the police, while George Mills, the Paymaster of the V. & T., rolled out into the street using expressions not necessary to print.

Hume drove the combination rig back to his father's stable and left it there.

Dreadful Deed.

London, Feb. 20.—A horrible case of murder and suicide occurred in a small hamlet in Cambridgeshire last evening. A widow named Farnham, who lived a secluded life in a cottage in the village, murdered her four children by cutting their throats and then completed the bloody work by cutting her own throat. No motive for the deed is known.

Lawyer Dennis and R. K. Coleord came in on yesterday's morning train

ELKO EXCITED.

It Expects to be Made the End of a Division.

The railroad boys have it that the Elko Board of Trade has offered the Southern Pacific Company a bonus of some thousands of dollars, to make Elko a subdivision of the Salt Lake division, and that the offer has been accepted. It is put up that in event of the change, the passenger engine runs on the west end of the division will run from Wadsworth to Elko and return, and the east end men will run from Ogden to Elko and return, with the cut-out at Terrace as at present. Passenger conductors will run from Wadsworth to Ogden as they do now, but will lay over at Elko instead of Carlin as at present. The freight train divisions will be Wadsworth to Winnemucca, Winnemucca to Elko, Elko to Terrace, Terrace to Ogden. From Carlin to Elko is just half way between Wadsworth and Ogden. If the additional 22 miles is put on, another passenger engine will probably be put on, making the seven engine and seven engine crews, which the engineers have requested repeatedly, no chain-gang to be done. With seven engines in the passenger service, the probability is strong that Winnemucca will be a "cut-out" or lay over place. The change will help Winnemucca by reason of more men, passenger engine crews and freight engine and train crews laying over there. It will be a great help and source of income for Elko for the same reasons. It will wipe Carlin out of existence as a railroad town. We know enough of the situation to know a seventh engine and crew are boons long sought, but hitherto vainly.—Wadsworth Dispatch.

Rich Rock.

Last week an Indian from Gen. a brought in some very rich specimens of gold bearing rock. He had Mr. Cromwell crush and wash out a piece of the rock for him and it proved to be very rich. The Indian returned to the find the same day and promised to return with more rock.

Yesterday about a dozen Indians came into town and each had some rock. It all carried gold and is free milling.

It is said that the Indians have taken Jim Toneyson in with them in order to hold the ground.

The exact location of the find is not known but is supposed to be a few miles South of Genoa.

CHEAP CUSTOM WORK A DECEPTION.

A style of tailoring is rapidly gaining headway which is but an imposition upon the consumer and a detriment to the workman. The cheap custom work or what is called "special order work," is a shrewd dodge for the purpose of deceiving the customer into the belief that he is obtaining custom work at ready made prices. The real worth of custom work lies in the exactness of the fit, and the thoroughness in which it is made. Cheap custom work is therefore inferior to ready made work.

Large concerns, some also engaged in ready made work have grown up of late and depend for patronage upon retail stores, and have numerous agents scattered every where soliciting orders and gain trade because of the strikingly cheap prices offered for goods made to order. As a rule these agents seldom obtain an order twice from the same person.

It is about time that this scheme was exposed to the people and ABE COHN of the EMPORIUM shows up the fraud. If you want clothes that fit and are tried on as often as is necessary call at the EMPORIUM Court House Building, Carson City, Nevada.
